UPDATES

FDA recalls Rohto Cooling Eye Drops Dry Aid

The FDA has recalled Rohto Cooling Eye Drops Dry Aid because there is a lack of assurance of sterility for products distributed nationwide in the U.S.

The FDA has recalled Rohto Cooling Eye Drops Dry Aid, a sterile eye product distributed nationwide in the United States. The recall reason is a lack of assurance of sterility.

Sterile means free from germs. The FDA alert says the product may not have the expected sterility assurance.

This recall is listed as a Class II recall by the FDA. Class II indicates a recall that may cause temporary or medically reversible harm.

Where this comes from

- US Food and Drug Administration - enforcement report

  https://www.fda.gov/drugs/drug-safety-and-availability/drug-recalls